At the end of the music, dancers of both circles turn in order to face the center of their circle:

- Outer circle: kneel right knee down, touch hat, bow heads

- Inner circle: bow down, take off hat, salute and sweep hats (French reverence)

- Solo dancer: stand up on toes, take hat off and hold it high

Final Note: Nowadays, the Southern French region of Camargue – geographically speaking, the province of the huge and wild Delta of Rhone River – still keeps its ancestral traditions of cowboys (called "gardians") herding bulls. Farandoles are danced in the "manades" (cattle stations), in the "mas" (ranches) and in villages during local and national feasts. Each musician holds his fife in one hand and plays the tambourine with his other hand; For information, the capital-city of Camargue is Nimes where the gardians' trousers were – and still are – sewn with "toile de Jeanne" (Canvas from Genoa; the French pronunciation "jayne" became Jeanne)., it is said that, in the 19th Century, a certain Mr Levy-Strauss spent some time in Nimes before immigrating to the USA and imported this material, then called "Jeans DeNim".
